ABSTRACT

This document presents a composite index that numerically ranks the nation's leading undergraduate colleges and universities based on seven criteria. The criteria include admission standards; number of recent recipients of Rhodes, Danforth, and National Science Foundation awards; proportion of recent graduates entering graduate or professional programs; proportion of faculty with doctorate; student-faculty ratio; faculty salaries; and library facilities. The publication is divided into five sections; alphabetical listings and ratings according to states, ranking by geographical region, ranking of privately supported institutions, ranking of publicly supported institutions and ranking of women's colleges. This publication is divided into five sections:

I. Alphabetical listings and ratings according to states.

II. Rankings by geographical regions.

III. Rankings of privately supported institutions.

IV. Rankings of publicly supported institutions.

V. Rankings of women's colleges.

HOW TO LOCATE THE RANKING OF A PARTICULAR COLLEGE BY CROSS-REFERENCE: Simply find the college in Section I where each institution is alphabetically listed according to state. The college's rating and the section number where the college's ranking will be found are shown next to the college's name. For example, Wesleyan, located in Connecticut, reflects a rating of 848 points. Roman numeral "III" indicates that Wesleyan is a privately supported institution listed in Section III. By referring to this section it is noted that with 848 points Wesleyan is ranked number 20.

"WHERE THE COLLEGES RANK" replaces the 1967 edition of the ratings.

No portion of the foregoing may be reproduced without the written consent of the copyright owner.

WHERE THE COLLEGES RANK

. . . . . the 1973 newly revised and expanded edition of ratings published by College • Rater, Inc.

Nearly 800 of the nation's leading undergraduate colleges and universities numerically ranked by state, region and aggregate.

Includes separate listings for following institutional categories: privately supported, publicly supported, and women's colleges.

WHERE THE COLLEGES RANK is a composite index which numerically ranks nearly 800 of the nation's leading undergraduate colleges and universities according to weighted parameters.

The ratings are divided into five sections:

I. Alphabetical listing subdivided by states.
II. Regional extracts (seven geographical areas).
III. Privately supported institutions.
IV. Publicly supported institutions.
V. Women's colleges.

Criteria* utilized in compiling the ratings are as follows:

Admission standards.
Number of recent recipients of Rhodes, Wilson, Danforth, and National Science Foundation awards.
Proportion of recent graduates entering graduate or professional programs.
Proportion of faculty with doctorate.
Student-faculty ratio.
Faculty salaries.
Library collection.

*weights assigned to these factors are indicated in the publication.

INTRODUCTION

WHERE THE COLLEGES RANK is a composite index which numerically ranks the nation's leading four-year undergraduate colleges and universities. It is the product of an objective impartial and non-interpretive study resulting in the rating of academic institutions by the application of weighted parameters.

It has been said that the use of statistics demonstrates the art of producing unreliable data from reliable figures. It is important that the reader understand that these ratings are based on statistics only and when considered by themselves can be both misleading and nebulous.

The ratings are based only on the weighted factors listed below. There has been no attempt to evaluate the academic excellence of a college or university, the competency of its faculty and staff, or the scope and variety of its curricula. Neither does it profess to measure the efficacy of the operation of its various departments nor the size of its physical plant and endowment. Guidelines used do not take into account the quality of the academic program, the intellectual environment, educational techniques, facilities and other considerations. If such imponderables could be measured, the ratings would change considerably. Therefore it should not be inferred that because college A ranks ahead of college B, it is necessarily superior.

In preparing a study of this nature certain criteria have been used. These are indicated below together with the approximate relative weights for each category.

A.	Admission standards.	31%
B.	Number of recent recipients of Rhodes, Wilson*, Danforth and National Science Foundation awards.	5%
C.	Proportion of recent graduates entering graduate or professional programs.	9%
D.	Proportion of faculty with doctorate.	18%
E.	Student-faculty ratio.	4%
F.	Faculty salaries.	18%
G.	Library collection.	15%
		100%

Note: The maximum number of points obtainable under this mathematical system of computation is 1142. Nearly 800 institutions have been rated.

Roman numerals used in Section I signify the specific section in which the institution is numerically ranked.

Material from which the ratings were compiled was obtained from standard and accepted public sources. The omission of familiar colleges and universities denotes that in these cases insufficient information was available from the material sources.

The 1973 edition of the ratings should not be compared with the previous editions (1967 and 1966). Not only were variations made in the relative weighting factors, but the method of formulating the statistics was modified.

CAUTION: THIS PUBLICATION SHOULD NOT BE USED BY PROSPECTIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS FOR THE PURPOSE OF COLLEGE SELECTION.

*The Woodrow Wilson Fellowships program has been suspended. The calculations reflect the most recent awards.
